eResources provide grapegrowers and winemakers with access to current and topical information which is crucial to staying abreast of emerging trends, technologies and processes.

The AWRI continues to invest in this space.

AWRI WEBSITE
(www.awri.com.au)

A new website update launched in early January 2016 provides users with easy navigation and access to new and refreshed content. It’s a one-stop source of information on AWRI research projects, winemaking and viticulture advice, online tools and apps, fact sheets, information packs, eBulletins and eNews.

TECHNICAL REVIEW
The online version of Technical Review is increasingly popular, with levy payers using it to access the latest AWRI publications and current literature on grape and wine production. Users can browse the list of current literature, read abstracts and order journal articles from the AWRI library.

LIBRARY CATALOGUE
The AWRI library houses one of the largest collection of grape and wine resources, comprising books, eBooks, journals, reprints, conference proceedings, regulations, standards and statistics. New items are added to the collection regularly and the online catalogue provides search functionality and quick access to more than 83,000 items.

EBOOKS
While traditional print resources remain popular, the recent introduction of an eBook platform has seen a shift towards accessing books digitally. eBooks can be read on mobile devices or downloaded for offline use. The collection is currently 70 titles strong, steadily growing and easy to use. A second platform will soon be launched.
